Dear Mr. Andrew:

Your note of February 25th is at hand. Please accept my apologies for the memorandum for dues ever having been sent you. It was a clerical oversight, which I very much regret.

Gentlemen:

Mr. Wyman left the States some years ago, and we have no trace of him at this time. The last address at which we reached him was 7 Rue Campagne Premiere, Paris, XIV.

→ THE OLD HOUSE,

MICHELMEERSH,
ROMSEY, HAMPSHIRE

England

Dear Sir

Do you know the medallic plaque of which I venture to enclose a rough sketch, drawn from memory after a careful examination of the original?

I assume that it represents either Washington or an American soldier, defending The Four Books against the British, helped by Providence with Thunder and lightning, and The Cap of Liberty held above his bare - save his wig - head as his ideal.

The Coin Department of the British Museum does not know it, nor has the Print Department any engraving of it nor from which it could be taken. To Messrs Spink also, it is unknown, so the Museum authorities suggest that I should refer the question to you as the most likely fountain of knowledge.

May I thank you in advance for any trouble I may be giving you

Yours sincerely
W. J. Andrew

W. J. Andrew, Esq.,
Hon. Secretary and Editor,
The British Numismatic Society

Dear Sir:

Since my last letter to you, I have sent your sketch to several collectors of Washington medals. None of them have ever seen this plaque; also, none of them think that it is a Washington document. In studying it over further, I am inclined to think that it does not refer to Washington, who is never pictured or referred to carrying a gun, even in symbolism - the aristocratic idea was too strong.

I am inclined to think that it may refer to the French Revolution. However, the fact remains that no one that I have shown it to has ever seen anything like it in this country.

Yours very truly,

THE BRITISH NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

Dear Mr. Noel

As editor of the Numismatic Notes and Monographs you may perhaps be now uninterested to know that a brochure on the "Barley coin of Norway" has been received most favourably in Scandinavia and near by lands. Thus Professor Appelgren-Kivels, last of the National Museum, Helsinki, Finland, designates it of great interest, and in Royal Museum at Stockholm, Sweden, consider it "a valuable thing (sic) for our Institution" and take the opportunity of saying "that I am fully convinced of the opinions there expressed."

This is all the more gratifying to me as Hildebrand, whose views I could not altogether agree with, was formerly a Director of the Museum here, and I know that in hospitality of your pages in including a purely European monograph has been equally justified in your free country.

With kind regards.

Yours sincerely

H. A. Savory.

Mr. H. Alexander Parsons,

Dear Mr. Parsons:

Your letter of November 19th reached me duly and I was very glad to learn of the reception of your Monograph in Scandinavian Circles. We are not in very close touch with them and, therefore, had no word of their attitude. There has been very little comment, so far as I know, on this side but that is not contrary to what might have been expected because so few of our Numismatists have paid any attention to the coinage of this particular period. Should I learn anything which seems worth referring to you, I shall be very glad to send you notice of it.

With cordial regards and with greetings of the season, I am

Sincerely yours,

Secretary
